ANSTO specialises in the development of life consumption algorithms for plant subjected to non steady state operation. The analysis is performed using advanced methods for determination of operating temperature in critical areas where current data is not available, combined with finite element modelling of high temperature strains during operational events.

Determination of life consumption for different operational events is performed using customised damage modelling appropriate to the operating conditions and materials to produce a life consumption algorithm tailored to your component or structure.